THAT with the closing of Peck's Hall in November, 1883, Warner's Hall became Circleville's popular amusement house. The former place, which according to the newspapers, closed for "unknown reasons," re-opened several weeks later, but failed to regain its former prestige.

Warner's Hall, operated by Messrs. Warner and Boyer, had a grand opening on Nov. 16, 1883, presenting the distinguished English actress, Katharine Rogers, who appeared in her famous impersonation of "Miss Moulton," the new East Lynn.

The new hall was improved and on the night of the opening impressed one as the typical city opera house, newspapers of the time commented. The stage had been enlarged and drop curtains, scenery, wings, stage fittings and two large dressing rooms had been provided. The auditorium had been accommodated with raised seats so arranged that each tier was elevated above the other, giving it the effect of an amphitheatre.

The new hall had a seating capacity of 400 persons. Many noted actors and actresses of the stage of 50 years ago appeared at Warner's.

That in January of 1884, "two young ladies who move in the best society," created quite a sensation in Circleville one evening by appearing on the streets in male attire. "The young ladies soon learned that this little diversion was against the law, and when the marshal got after them, they took to their heels." The Herald of the time commented.

That in November, 1833, New Holland had one of the most unusual marriage ceremonies ever performed in the county. Here's how The Herald of the time tells the story:

"Last Sunday as the morning services at Christian Church, New Holland, were about finished, a young man hastily came into the church and requested the minister to come outside and perform a marriage ceremony. The minister suggested that the couple come into the church, but the young fellow informed him that he was in a big hurry. Thereupon Elder Kile went outside and married the couple in their buggy."

That Circleville's gas company reduced the rate charged to their customers in November, 1883. The price following the cut was $2.25 to $1, and to consumers using 10,000 feet and over, $2.

THAT Robert Randolph, a colored native of Circleville, led the horses in the funeral processions of Lincoln and Garfield. He later was a barber in Cleveland and died in November, 1883. The Democratic Cleveland Plain Dealer had the following comment: "The Republicans of Cleveland didn't raise enough money for a Christian burial, $16, so his body was turned over to the saw bones."

That the temperature in Circleville 50 years ago the past week ranged from 10 to 15 degrees below zero, according to reports contained in the city's newspapers of the time.

NEW HOLLAND FIVE BECOMES FAVORITE OF TOURNAMENT

Hobble-Men Defeat Ashville 31-25 in Upset of Annual County Cage Meet

DARBY VICTORIOUS

Decide Girls' Title at 7 O'clock Tonight

Ranked as an outsider before the tournament losing three games to county teams, New Holland has stepped in as favorite in the tournament today replacing the odds on choice, Ashville, after defeating the Harrison-twp. cage Friday evening.

The score was 31-25.

As a result of the victory New Holland played a pretty good Darby-twp. team in a semifinal tilt this afternoon while Williamsport and Walnut-twp. contested in the lower bracket.

Darby-twp. defeated Perry-twp. 31-11; Williamsport turned back Muhlenberg-twp. 18-12, and Walnut-twp. drubbed Scioto-twp. 40-26 in Friday's other games.

SURPRISED CROWD

The New Holland victory, which must go down in tournament history as another of a long string of tournament upsets, surprised every one on the court except the New Holland athletes and their coach, Warren Hobbie.

A county team has probably never before pointed for one contest as the Bulldogs have for that Ashville scrap. It was apparent when the drawings were made that Ashville and New Holland would meet in the second round and right then Coach Hobbie started drilling his boys for the supreme effort. He worked on defense, defense, defense and more defense, and as a result of these efforts the Ashville offense, which has run up over 40 points on nearly every team in the county, was blocked.

Ashville tried desperately to score; the team even went ahead 22-22 with 23 seconds left to play in the third period. New Holland took time out at this point and went on to win.

GRANT'S SAFE SHATTERED BY BLAST, FRIDAY

Coal Office Scene of Robbery; Diamond, Typewriter, Money Taken

AUTO STOLEN, TOO

No Finger Prints are Found of 'Experts'

The safe in the coal office of S. C. Grant, S. Pickaway-st., was blown open by 'safe-crackers' early Friday evening and a ladies' diamond ring valued at $75, a portable typewriter valued at $45 and $30 in money were stolen.

The safe was destroyed by the blast which lifted it off the floor and tossed it over on its back. Police believe experts did the job because not a window was broken in the office.

A finger-print expert from the London prison farm arrived here Saturday morning to investigate the 'job.' He said the robbers apparently wore gloves all during their operation because not a single finger-print could be found.

The daring of the robbers is shown by the fact that the 'job' was perpetrated between 9 and 10 p. m. Friday. Mr. Grant, proprietor of the office, discovered the safe-blowing.

Police are trying to connect the robbery with the theft of a Pontiac belonging to Gail Wilson, S. Pickaway-st. The car, bearing license plates number 474-099, was stolen at about the same time from its parking place on that street. Notice of the robbery and auto

Associate Lauds Judge Allen As "One of Finest"

Appointment to Court of Appeals Bench Seems Certain For Woman Barrister.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 24.—"There is no court too big for Judge Allen to sit on."

This assertion of Judge Will P. Stephenson, a colleague on the Ohio supreme court bench, epitomized the reaction today of supreme court members and attaches to the nomination of Judge Florence Allen to be U. S. circuit court of appeals judge in Cincinnati.

The capital regarded her nomination by U. S. Sen. Robert J. Bulkley as tantamount to appointment by President Roosevelt as successor to the late Federal Judge Smith Hickenlooper.

If she is appointed, Judge Allen will be the first woman ever to serve as a federal court judge. She already holds the distinction of being the first woman to serve on a supreme court.

EDITORS NOTE—Italy is worried now as never before since the World War, writes H. R. Knickerböcker, International News Service's brilliant foreign correspondent in this article of his series "Will War Come?" Trieste, near the Austrian border, and learns why Italy does not want Germany to have Austria.

Italy has ordered a crack motorized army corps, capable of moving all equipment, from Vienna to Bolzano, within striking distance of the Austrian frontier.

Next door is the next reason why Italy does not want Germany to have Austria. The South Tyrol, "redeemed" by Italy from Austria after the war, contains 250,000 Germans. Five years ago the Italian government announced that the South Tyrol had been completely Italianized. But the 250,000 Germans are still Germans.

DELAWARE HIT BY HUGE FIRE

City Building Ruined With Loss of $500,000; Flames Rage Uncontrolled.

DELAWARE, Feb. 24.—Raging uncontrolled for more than three hours and threatening to spread through the entire downtown business district, fire today destroyed Delaware's half-century old city hall here which housed the town's fire department, police station, jail and city administration offices.

Leaving only a mere shell of the building standing when the blaze finally was brought under control by the Delaware fire department aided by a force of firemen from Columbus, the conflagration caused damages which were expected to total approximately $500,000.

BEGAN IN BASEMENT

The blaze started about 2:30 o'clock this morning in a basement room which had been used to store tools and equipment of the city civil works administration.

Feeding on the pine wood, which lined the building, the fire spread rapidly through the walls, quickly getting beyond control.

At the time the fire broke out, the Delaware fire department was fighting a small blaze which had broken out in a nearby feed store.

The blaze in the city hall was discovered by two transients who had just left their quarters previously had given lodging for the night. The only other person in the building at the time was the night police captain who hurriedly summoned the fire department.

Hampered by zero weather, which turned the flood of water poured into the burning building into sheets of ice, the firemen fought desperately to stave off the threatened spread of the blaze. A platoon and a force of 12 firemen were summoned from Columbus to aid in battling the flames.

Worked by the roaring flames all inner walls of the building collapsed, leaving only a fire-shattered brick shell standing when the fire finally was brought under control early this morning.

A platoon of firemen sat atop the smoking wreckage during the conflagration.

All city records were destroyed and the fire also demolished the Little Theatre room of Ohio Wesleyan University which was contained in the building. Costumes, stage settings and other theatrical equipment also went up in flames.

Although the situation presented a serious hazard to the firemen, no one was injured.

"I tell that somebody should put a stop to the footloose that thieves and racketeers were attempting to gain in Hollywood," Mae declared.

Defy President on Bonus Bill

Representative Roy Ayers, of Montana (right), 145th member of the House to sign the petition which will bring the two billion dollar Bonus Bill before the House in March despite threat of veto by the President. Before the House in March despite threat of veto by the President. Before the House in March despite threat of veto by the President.

COUNTY VETERANS WOULD GET $482,929 IN BONUS PAYMENT

Underwood Not One of 145 Signers to Petition to Force Vote in House; Over Two Billions Would Be Divided Among Veterans.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24.—Pickaway-co veterans will get $482,929.74 if the bill for immediate payment of the bonus, upon which the house will vote March 12, is passed by Congress, according to Wright Patman (D. Tex.) author of the measure.

The March 12 vote was forced by a petition signed by 145 house members, moving to discharge the Ways and Means committee from consideration of the Patman bill. Representative Earl G. Underwood was not among those listed as signers of the petition. No effort to get further signatures was made after the necessary number to force the vote had, been secured.

SHARE OF 2 BILLION
Patman's estimate as to the amount which Pickaway-co veterans would get if his bill passes was made in a speech on the floor of the house Tuesday, the day the petition was presented. This is approximately $2,200,000,000 still due veterans throughout the country on the adjusted service certificates, Patman said.

The Patman bill provides for immediate payment of the bonus in full, by issuance of greenbacks in the amount required.

House leaders entertain no doubt that the motion discharging the committee from consideration of the bill will be carried forcing a vote on the measure itself. President Roosevelt has threatened to veto the bill if it passes.

GRANT'S SAFE SHATTERED BY BLAST, FRIDAY

Coal Office Scene of Robbery; Diamond, Type-writer, Money Taken

AUTO STOLEN, TOO

No Finger-Prints are Found of 'Experts'

The safe in the coal office of S. C. Grant, S. Pickaway-st., was blown open by 'safe-crackers' early Friday evening and a ladies' diamond ring valued at $75, a portable typewriter valued at $45 and $30 in money were stolen.

The safe was destroyed by the blast which lifted it off the floor and tossed it over on its back. Police believe experts did the job because not a window was broken in the office.

A finger-print expert from the London prison farm arrived here Saturday morning to investigate the 'job.' He said the robbers apparently wore gloves all during their operation because not a single finger-print could be found.

EARLY IN EVENING
The daring of the robbers is shown by the fact that the 'job' was perpetrated between 9 and 10 p. m. Friday. Mr. Grant, proprietor of the office, discovered the safe-blowing.

Police are trying to connect the robbery with the theft of a Pontiac roadster belonging to Gail Wilson, S. Pickaway-st. The car, bearing license plates number 474-099, was stolen at about the same time from its parking place on that street. Notice of the robbery and auto

Associate Lauds Judge Allen As "One of Finest"

Appointment to Court of Appeals Bench Seems Certain For Woman Barrister.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 24.—"There is NO court too big for Judge Allen to sit on."

This assertion of Judge Will P. Stephenson, a colleague on the Ohio supreme court bench, epitomized the reaction today of supreme court members and attaches to the nomination of Judge Florence Allen to be U. S. circuit court of appeals judge in Cincinnati.

The capital regarded her nomination by U. S. Sen. Robert J. Bulkley as tantamount to appointment by President Roosevelt as successor to the late Federal Judge Smith Hickenlooper.

If she is appointed, Judge Allen will be the first woman ever to serve as a federal court judge. She already holds the distinction of being the first woman to serve on a supreme court.

Appraisers are Carl Andrews, J. G. Owens, and Earl Arnold.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Italy is worried now as never before since the World War, writes H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service's brilliant foreign correspondent in this article of his series "Will War Come?"

Knickerbocker visits Trieste, near the Austrian border and learns why Italy does not want Germany to have Austria.

Italy has ordered a crack motorized army corps, capable of moving at thirty miles an hour with all equipment, from Verona to Bolzano, within striking distance of the Austrian frontier.

DELAWARE HIT BY HUGE FIRE

City Building Ruined With Loss of $500,000; Flames Rage Uncontrolled.

DELAWARE, Feb. 24.—Raging uncontrolled for more than three hours and threatening to spread through the entire downtown business district, fire today destroyed Delaware's half-century old city hall here which housed the town's fire department, police station, jail and city administration offices.

Leaving only a mere shell of the building standing when the blaze finally was brought under control by the Delaware fire department aided by a force of firemen from Columbus, the conflagration caused damages which were expected to total approximately $500,000.

BEGAN IN BASEMENT

The blaze started about 2:30 o'clock this morning in a basement room which had been used to store tools and equipment of the civil works administration. Feeding on the pine wood, which lined the building, the fire spread rapidly through the walls, quickly getting beyond control.

At the time the fire broke out, the Delaware fire department was fighting a small blaze which had broken out in a nearby feed store.

The blaze in the city hall was discovered by two transients, who had just a few minutes previously been given a rooming for the night. The only other person in the building at the time was the night police captain who hurriedly summoned the fire department.

Hampared by zero weather, which turned the flood of water poured into the burning building into sheets of ice, the firemen fought desperately to stave off the threatened spread of the blaze. A pumper and a force of 12 firemen were summoned from Columbus to aid in battling the flames.

Weakened by the roaring flames all inner walls of the building collapsed, leaving only a fire-charred brick shell standing when the fire finally was brought under control early this morning.

The town clock which sat atop the building crashed during the conflagration.

All city records were destroyed and the fire also demolished the Little Theatre room of Ohio Wesleyan University which was contained in the building. Costumes, stage settings and other theatrical equipment also went up in flames. Although the conflagration presented a serious hazard to the firemen, no one was injured.

MAE WEST, ANGRY, DEFIES GANGSTERS

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 24.—Mae West today flung down the gauntlet to gangdom.

The spectacular screen and stage star, under double guard since she took the witness stand to testify against one of three men accused of robbing her of $17,000 in jewels and $3,400 in cash, announced she would appear as a witness against the other pair if they are brought to trial.

"I felt that somebody should put a stop to the foothold that thieves and racketeers were attempting to gain in Hollywood," Mae declared.

Weather Conditions Continue Brutal; Mail Flyer Dies in Atlantic

2 OTHERS RESCUED

Dense Fog Causes Concern in Western States

By International News Service

The brutal weather conditions which sent five army air mail pilots to their deaths within the past few days today threatened the lives of seven men and a woman aboard a giant twin-motored passenger plane, lost in fog and snow between Salt Lake City and Rock Springs, Wyoming.

The plane dropped from sight after leaving Salt Lake City yesterday afternoon. A widespread search was being made over the desert stretches of western Wyoming and Eastern Utah.

TWO RESCUED

Meanwhile, the two army pilots rescued from their disabled amphibian plane in the Atlantic ocean off the southern coast of Long Island where reported progressing favorably. Search continued for the body of Lieutenant George F. McDermott of Pittsburgh, swept overboard and lost while costguardsmen strove desperately to reach the foundered plane.

Army mail planes assigned to the Kansas City, Mo., base were grounded for the first time since service began because of bad weather.

In Washington, a high ranking army officer divulged to International News Service that the air force found itself handicapped by governmental economy when it took over the mails, 62 per cent of all airplane motors being in repair depots awaiting overhauling at the time the order went through.

Mrs. Massie Wins Divorce, Stricken By Nervousness

Enters Hospital After Being Ill While Attending Party With Friends.

RENO, Nev., Feb. 24.—Mrs. Thalia Massie, contrast figure in the Honolulu "honor slaying" tragedy two years ago, was in a hospital today under treatment for nervousness following her divorce yesterday from Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N.

Mrs. Massie suffered a collapse at the Heidelberg Inn where she was attending a party with friends last night and was taken to the hospital by her Attorney George Springmeyer and Dr. Vinton A. Muller, the latter ordering her to take at least two days' rest in the institution before leaving Reno.

Reports that Mrs. Massie was suffering from the effects of poison were denied emphatically by Dr. Muller who said that her condition was brought about by acute nervousness over her court appearance.

PAST LIFE ENDED

Following her arrival in Reno Jan. 10 Mrs. Massie said that she hoped to turn over a new page in her life and following the divorce yesterday she said that she had done so and that her former life was closed and sealed.

She reiterated that she had obtained the divorce at the insistence of Lieut. Massie.

Although the case yesterday was tried behind closed doors it was understood that Mrs. Massie testified that she had been at all times a dutiful wife. She charged Lieut. Massie with mental cruelty, it was declared, and related that she had asked Lieut. Massie for an interview but that he had refused to grant it.

Rudy's Wife Scoffs at Court's Decision

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—Fay Webb Vallee, estranged wife of Rudy Vallee, the crooner, today took issue with the decision in New York of Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Sheintag restraining her from suing Vallee for separation anywhere except in New York.

Her attorney, Ben. C. Cohen, announced that Mrs. Vallee would continue to contest for the right to place her marital troubles before a California court.

Mrs. Vallee has pending in the California court a demand for $7,450 a month temporary alimony to replace the $100 weekly she is receiving under the separation agreement. This is scheduled for hearing early next month as the next step in her legal battle.

The Church Invites You

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE CHURCH

President Roosevelt recently said: "Toward a new definition of prosperity the churches and the government, while wholly separate in their functions, can work hand in hand. Government can ask the churches to stress in their teachings the ideals of social justice, while at the same time government guarantees to the churches the right to worship in their own way."

"The churches, while they remain wholly free from even the suggestion of interference in government, can at the same time teach their millions of followers that they have the right to demand of the government of their own choosing, the maintenance and furtherance of a more abundant life.
State and church are rightly united in a common aim. With the help of God we are on the road to it."

While discharging our duty as a citizen to the state why not discharge our duty to the church and accept the invitation to COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE CHURCH

President Roosevelt recently said: "Toward a new definition of prosperity the churches and the government, while wholly separate in their functions, can work hand in hand. Government can ask the churches to stress in their teachings the ideals of social justice, while at the same time government guarantees to the churches the right to worship in their own way."

"The churches, while they remain wholly free from even the suggestion of interference in government, can at the same time teach their millions of followers that they have the right to demand of the government of their own choosing, the maintenance and furtherance of a more abundant life. State and church are rightly united in a common aim. With the help of God we are on the road to it."

While discharging our duty as a citizen to the state why not discharge our duty to the church and accept the invitation to COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

Lesson for February 25

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9:37, 38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Win Others to Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Win Others to Christ?

1. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (9:35-38).
And as he went on his rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, he saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd, and his sympathy for them was aroused. This moved him.

1. To declare that the harvest was plenteous but the laborers were few (v. 37). He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested, with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field.

2. To ask them to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the harvest (v. 38). Those whom he would send forth as laborers into his harvest field he desired to be imbued with the spirit of sympathy which would move them to pray for the thrusting forth of laborers.

11. The Laborers Chosen (10:1-4).
These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry forth the work of the propagation of the kingdom.

111. The Sending Forth of the Twelve (10:5-42).
The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of missionary endeavor in the present age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 5-15). Observe

a. The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were to go only to the Jews. They had no message for Gentiles or even Samaritans. No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today.

b. Their message (v. 7). "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." By this is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand—Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up his kingdom. The Jews rejected and crucified him. In this time of his rejection the church is being selected from all the nations of the world.

c. The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles. These wonderful works were really done by the twelve. No such power is now possessed by missionaries.

d. Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way.

e. The responsibilities of those to whom the message was delivered (vv. 11-15). If the people would not receive them to hear their message they were to turn away and pronounce judgment upon them.

2. Instructions concerning the testimony from the day of Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23). After Pentecost testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both

Both sides admitted that the man was dead and that his will said so and so about

They put a fellow on the witness stand that had been the Scotchman's financial adviser.

"You say he died sudden?"

"Awful sudden."

"What makes you think so?"

"Well, I know it. Nobody saw him die, and it was a week before the body was found, but there was evidence that Sandy went out mighty quick?"

"What evidence?"

"Well, for one thing, there was a letter he had got that day that he's supposed to have died, and the stamp on it happened to be uncanceled. The uncanceled stamp was still on the envelope, on Sandy's desk. We all know that if Sandy had had even ten minutes of warning he would of wrote a letter to somebody to make use of that stamp."

World Religious News

Dr. George L. Kieffer, president of the American Association of Religious Statisticians of America, has compiled some interesting figures regarding the amazing growth of Christianity through the ages. In 100 A. D. there were 50,000 Christians in the world. In 1000 A. D. there were 500,000. In 1500 there were 80,000,000 Catholics and 20,000,000 Jews, Waldensians, Hussites and Lollards. In 1880 there were 74,000,000 Protestants and 149,000,000 Catholics and in 1933, 335,482,881 Catholics and 165,000,000 Protestants. In the United States all religious bodies increased from 1830 to 1930 416 per cent while the nation's population increased only 255 per cent.

The publication of an unpublished work by Charles Dickens "The Life of Our Lord" was sanctioned recently by Sir Henry Dickens the novelist's last surviving child, who did not long ago. Charles Dickens had for some reason, expressed the desire that it should not be published.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has translated the Gospel of Luke and made it available to an unreachd tribe of Nigeria, the Tanganyika who live 1000 miles from the coast. The tribe numbers 40,000 and their clothing, if any, is raw hide and green leaves. They are entirely illiterate.

A total average annual expenditure of $24,893,888 for home missions is shown by 22 Protestant denominations in a 5 year survey just completed by the Home Missions Council. The total enterprises recorded are 29,653 including Sunday schools, churches, schools, community centers and hospitals.

Missinaries-A World Asset

A certain business man has observed "Wherever the missionary works it is discovered that a community which had been a world liability has become a world asset." In China the largest printing press in Asia grew out of the Presbyterian Mission Press at Shanghai. Nanking university, a union Christian institution, conducts laboratories for experimentation in improved cotton and sericulture which have greatly increased the quality, output and demand for these products. Common American fruits, now profitable products of Japan, were introduced by a Methodist missionary. Sugar cane growing as an occupation for the natives of Natal, South Africa was introduced by a missionary. H. B. Hunnicut of the Southern Presbyterian church practically revolutionized agricultural methods in Brazil and Sam Higginbottom has done the same for part of India. The national agricultural show at Old Untail, South Africa grew out of the industrial mission school.

Our religious consciousness in its highest and most blessed moments of worship is not complete until it flows out into acts that will bless and beautify the world.

WARN RESIDENTS TO FLEE DISTRICT

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—Residents of the LaCrescenta-Montrose suburban districts early today were warned to prepare to evacuate their homes following a heavy rainfall in the area in which 40 or more persons were drowned in the torrential rains of New Year's day.

The flood ravaged area was visited during the night by rains of cloudburst proportions and before daybreak scores of families were reported to have fled from their homes in marooned Tujunga to escape torrents racing down mountain washes.

Deputy sheriffs, members of the American Legion and volunteers were hurriedly thrown into the district to aid in the evacuation of families in the menaced sectors.

The storm was accompanied by thunder and lightning.

UPSETS in the Pickaway-co basketball tournament are giving new * * * Ashville has suffered them and so have a number of other teams in the past number of years * * * We need to go back farther than 1928 to find New Holland the victim of one of the biggest upsets in history, being beaten 8-6 by Ashville with a far superior team * * *

Then comes 1929 when New Holland won the title defeating Salt-creek, which team was favored to go through the tourney * * * In 1930 came an even bigger upset with Scioto-twp's boys coached by Johnny Barton, who has since returned to the school as superintendent, defeating Ashville in the first round and going on to victory after defeating a fine Walnut-twp team, then coming from far behind to edge Williamsport in the finals * * *

Saltcreek, a darkhorse, won the championship in 1931 doubling the score on New Holland the semifinal after the west-countians had won by a 22-2 score during the season * * * Pickaway with a fine team was beaten in the finals * * * Jim Chilcote, Ab Spangler and Jim Hartranft were the stars in this Saltcreek lineup.

In 1932 and 1933 the favorites came through both years, New Holland winning both championships * * * Coach Pierson had a fine team in 1932 and handed another fine one to Warren Middle in 1933 * * * Incidentally this 1933 team, rated a strong one, was beaten in the district tournament by Ashville, the county's third place team * * *

NOW WILL NEW HOLLAND GO ON TO WIN ITS THIRD STRAIGHT TITLE OR WILL IT FALL BY THE WAYSIDE IN ANOTHER UPSET? The team was beaten during the season by three county teams, Perry, Salt-creek, and Pickaway, all of whom have been eliminated from the tournament * * *

It is believed that the appearance of John Ribl, watchman at the Rader Coal yard, prevented robbery of the place earlier in the evening. He saw two men, one large and one small, peering into the window of the coal office when he walked around a building. The men quickly climbed a fence to make their getaway, Ribl reported.

Patrolman Alva Shasteen, covering the south end Friday night, was in the vicinity of the Circleville Iron and Metal Co. when the robbery was committed.

LONG OVERDUE

The plane was due in Rock Springs at 3 p. m. yesterday. Nearly twelve hours later officials of United Air Lines here had been unable to locate the sky liner.

A dull humming of distant motors was heard over the desert stretches of western Wyoming and eastern Utah early last night.

The missing plane, one of the crack liners of the United Airlines, left Salt Lake City at 2:30 p. m. and was due at Rock Springs a half hour later. A passenger was to have been dropped at the latter point.

The plane never reached Rock Springs. A heavy fog, in which the ship was believed lost, covered the ground in the vicinity of Rock Springs. The fog was so heavy a westbound plane that left Rock Springs for Salt Lake Friday afternoon, bearing Edward A. Hayes, national commander of the American Legion, turned back.

FINAL TOURNNEY SESSION BEGINS AT 7 P. M.

Warm Tilt Seen For Girls' Title

free throws, led 9-6 at the end of the first period, but New Holland put on an offensive in the second period that carried it to a 17-14 lead at halftime. The third session closed 23-22, and then came the final period which saw Ashville almost routed.

LANDMAN BIG NOISE

To Everett Landman, big center, and to Kirk and Mumford, forwards, must go the laurels for New Holland's victory. The big Landman, assigned to stop Jimmy Scoles, Ashville's fine center, did a good job of it holding the pivot man to 10 points, six of them free throws. Not only did Landman put the handcuffs on Scoles but he added 14 points to the New Holland cause with six field shots and two free throws.

Kirk proved the best floor man of the tournament up to this time, digging the ball out and passing like a collegian. He was the spearhead of the New Holland attack although he scored only six points. Much credit must also go to the New Holland guards, Vincent, Dennis, Mace, and McCune. Vincent, the best of the quartet, was put out on fouls before the second period had ended. This was thought to be a blow to the "Dogs" but Dennis took his place and showed he knew what it was all about.

Ashville lost, that is true, but it can't be said the team quit. It was a bewildered quintet when its pet offense with Scoles as the pivot was stopped. Wink Wellington played the untire game despite his injured wrist and scoring eight points showed that he hadn't lost any of his wizardry on the floor. Scoles tried hard but just couldn't get the ball with which to score. His baskets were made on follow shots. It must be said that the Ashville guards did not perform up to their season's standard. They lost a number of opportunities by faulty handling of the leather when a good pass would have meant a field goal.

RECORD OUTSTANDING

It seems a shame that a team which has passed through the season with the record of the Ashville team should be eliminated from a tournament, but as the saying goes "Favorites do not mean a thing in the Pickaway-co tournament."

Darby, led by Winfough and Bob Green, showed that New Holland will not have an easy time winning in the semifinal round this evening. The Frisch-coached boys took an early lead over Perry-twp and were never headed.

The score by quarters, Darby leading the whole way, was 6-4, 11-8, 24-11, and 31-11. Winfough scored six field goals and one foul, and Green counted four action shots and three charity tosses. Perry's scoring was evenly divided.

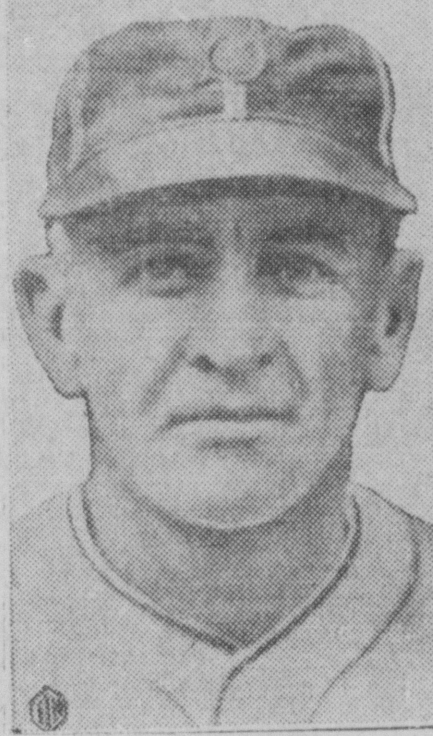

Bob Carter and Hanson led Williamsport to its victory over Muhlenberg. The game was loosely played by both sides, neither showing concerted attack or defense.

Carter scored 11 points and Hanson got six of the 18.

O'HARA IS FEATURE

The Walnut and Scioto game found Kaiser and Wayne Brown going hot for the winners with O'Hara, Scioto's diminutive forward, stealing the show as much as he could in a lone-handed effort. Kaiser scored 14 points, Wayne

Brown got 11, but O'Hara took the tournament's single game lead with 15 on seven action shots and a foul toss.

Walnut led the whole way. This afternoon's games found New Holland and Darby playing at 2 o'clock, Williamsport and Walnut at 3 o'clock, and Monroe and Walnut girls at 4 o'clock in the girls' consolation.

The final session's game this evening find the girls' championship to be decided between Scioto-twp and Ashville at 7 o'clock, the boys' teams which lose this afternoon playing in a third-place game at 8 o'clock and the boys' finalists at 9 o'clock.

WARN RESIDENTS TO FLEE DISTRICT

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—Residents of the LaCrescenta-Montrose suburban districts early today were warned to prepare to evacuate their homes following a heavy rainfall in the area in which 40 or more persons were drowned in the torrential rains of New Year's day.

The flood ravaged area was visited during the night by rains of cloudburst proportions and before daybreak scores of families were reported to have fled from their homes in marooned Tujunga to escape torrents racing down mountain washes.

Deputy sheriffs, members of the American Legion and volunteers were hurriedly thrown into the district to aid in the evacuation of families in the menaced sectors.

The storm was accompanied by thunder and lightning.

Locals End Sorrowful Season In 36-21 Defeat; Reserves Lose, Too.

Circleville high school Tigers closed their most unsuccessful season in many years, Friday evening, by dropping a 36-21 decision to Grandview's Bobcats on the Columbus suburb court.

Ability of Wells and Taylor, tall Grandview stars, caused the downfall of the Red and Black. Wells counted eight field goals and Taylor seven.

Leasure was high man for the locals with eight points. In a preliminary Grandview reserves drubbed Circleville reserves 43-14.

RADCLIFF TO SEEK OFFICE

Popular Sheriff Circulating Petition For Third Term; Office Record Fine.

Sheriff Charles H. Radcliff announced Saturday, that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the office he now holds.

No opposition has been reported against the popular law enforcement official and it is reported among political leaders there will be no contest despite the fact the sheriff is seeking his third term.

The record Radcliff and his deputies, Bryan Custer, Robert Armstrong, and Miller Fissell, have set up has probably never been matched in the history of Pickaway-co. There are few crimes that have been committed in Pickaway-co in the less than four years this organization has been in office that have not been solved.

UPSETS in the Pickaway-co basketball tournament are a line new * * * Ashville has suffered them and so have a number of other teams in the past number of years * * * We need to go back to a year than 1928 to find New Holland the victim of one of the biggest upsets in history, being beaten 8-6 by Ashville with a far superior team * * *

Then comes 1929 when New Holland won the title defeating Salt-creek, which team was favored to go through the tourney * * * In 1930 came an even bigger upset with Scioto-twp's boys coached by Johnny Barton, who has since returned to the school as superintendent, defeating Ashville in the first round and going on to victory after defeating a fine Walnut-twp team, then coming from far behind to edge Williamsport in the finals * *

Saltcreek, a darkhorse, won the championship in 1931 doubling the score on New Holland the semifinal after the west-countians had won by a 22-2 score during the season * * * Pickaway with a fine team was beaten in the finals * * * Jim Chillicothe, Ab Spangler and Jim Hartranft were the stars in this Saltcreek lineup.

In 1932 and 1933 the favorites came through both years, New Holland winning both championships * * * Coach Pierson had a fine team in 1932 and handed another fine one to Warren Hobbie in 1933 * * * Incidentally this 1933 team, rated a strong one, was beaten in the district tournament by Ashville, the county's third place team * * *

NOW WILL NEW HOLLAND GO ON TO WIN ITS THIRD STRAIGHT TITLE OR WILL IT FALL BY THE WAYSIDE IN ANOTHER UPSET * * * The team was beaten during the season by three county teams, Perry, Salt-creek, and Pickaway, all of whom have been eliminated from the tournament * * *

City People

ESTABLISHMENT in a New York municipal hospital of a department of free plastic surgery suggested to a Canadian editorial writer that perhaps it is a waste of public funds to spend millions for monumental buildings and beautiful parks only to have them disfigure and marred by association with human beings nature has seen fit to mould in ugly patterns. It is true that life in the city is made less pleasant and beautiful by the human derelicts and monstrosities attracted there and that more handsome features would heighten the joys of routine existence.

But wouldn't that be wasted money also without a little "brain surgery" to beautify the urban intellect? While it is true that beautiful parks and public buildings and handsome faces help to elevate the mind, there is room for some direct elevating.

Cities are the true centers of culture because of their libraries, museums, concerts and leaders in the fields of thought and art, yet it is not their culture that is their chief attraction either to the natives or to visitors. With every cultural advantage at their command the metropolitans do not attain a culture much higher than that of the small town citizen. It has been said with a high degree of truth that the native of New York is the most provincial person in the country.

Granite, trees and music are not always outward evidence of urban culture. Museums have been built, parks laid out and symphony orchestras and civic operas supported by public subscriptions, not because of a genuine taste for these better things of life, but because it was considered the proper thing to do and because other cities have done so.

The test of virtue is to decide that dancing is sinful before you get stiff with rheumatism.

Keep Our Waters Clean

PERHAPS one of the most difficult tasks confronting the various states is the correction of the water pollution evil. It is a problem presenting many complexities becoming more entangled each year as industry, municipality and individual persist in violating the laws of nature by turning our lakes and streams into dumping grounds for their wastes and sewage.

Henry Ward Baldwin, one of the trustees of the Izaak Walton League of America, says: "America's vast riches have been derived fundamentally from three sources—land, water and wild life. Of these three pure water is the most essential. With out water life can not exist. Nature grants this blessing to favored lands, and man at the most can only regulate in part its distribution. The supply that comes as the greatest gift of God to man is pure and health giving. The responsibility for its proper care rests with us. Nature controls the quantity, man must control the quality and give unimpeded to future generations this priceless heritage."

The residents of every state know what water pollution means. In their generation they have seen the cool, sparkling, clear water of their lakes and streams turned into sluggish, filth-laden sewers. They have watched this menace spread as civilization advanced and often the community health has been endangered by this evil. Fish life has been destroyed and every water right of the riparian owner downstream from the point of pollution has been violated.

Science many times has pointed the way to correct this abuse. Industrial wastes, raw sewage and other contaminating refuse can be treated so that whatever liquid residue may reach our watercourses is harmless. It is our bounden duty to banish water pollution.

A man isn't a failure until his chief pleasure is in telling the faults of his successful friends.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By JOAN CLAYTON
 COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

To help support her stepmother and stepbrother, young and beautiful Patricia Warren, a skilled card player, plays bridge for fifty cents an hour at parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, offers to make Patricia his secretary and partner. His amorous advances cause Patricia to decline his business offer much to her stepmother's chagrin. Patricia meets Clark Tracy, the polo player and her ideal, at Mrs. Sycott's. She is heartbroken to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. Bill McGee, a racketeer, is interested in Patricia but she loathes him. However, afraid to refuse his invitation, she accompanies him to a New Year's Eve dance. He is shot by a rival gangster. Patricia rushes home only to be put out by her stepmother who says the police are looking for Patricia. Unable to find employment, Patricia turns to professional bridge. One day, she is stunned when Haverholt happens to be one of her opponents. She becomes unnerved and loses heavily. Haverholt takes her home and renews his bridge business offer. Patricia accepts. While celebrating the partnership in Haverholt's home, Dorothy Luray, his former secretary, appears in a jealous rage. Patricia is about to go but Dorothy's insolence causes her to stay. Dorothy leaves.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

They entered the living room. Patricia sat down, feeling weary and flat and forlorn. Dorothy Luray had spoiled everything. Haverholt stood in the middle of the room, looking at her.

"You were an awfully good sport," he observed after a space. "I know it was darn difficult for you, but you took it like a trooper. You should be proud of yourself."

"I'm not," said Patricia slowly, thickly, "not proud at all."

"I would have given anything to have prevented what happened," the man began anew. "If there were anything I could have done..."

His voice trailed to silence. He shrugged, concluded, "It was just one of those things."

"I suppose so," Patricia conceded a second time. She said, "I don't really want a drink."

"You need one now. Bacardi was made for times like this." Silently he opened a corner cabinet that turned itself miraculously into a tiny, lacquered bar, busied himself preparing the shaker and selecting the ingredients, all in a manner both natural and casual. Glancing at Patricia's somber face, he said, "It isn't fun any more, is that what you are thinking?"

"More or less."

"Why not think of me, or my side of it? I had plans too. I counted on having you here, counted on your first impression. Why not remember that? Things might be spoiled for me too?"

Haverholt carefully completed his pouring, turned to say abruptly, "Think it over while I get the ice. You don't need my help. Will you excuse me?"

"Yes."

He left the room. No sooner had he gone than Patricia was on her feet. Noiselessly and swiftly she entered the foyer, paused, her hand on the outer door. Somewhere in the back of the house she heard movement. Haverholt getting the ice... What would he think when he returned to find her vanished? He had thought her brave and mature, a good sport. What would he think when he returned? She wavered and then slowly went back into the living room. Five minutes later he found her there.

"Are you sure?" he asked, sinking to the arm of her chair and continuing to look into her eyes.

"Quite sure," she informed him steadily.

"Well then—"

He rose. Like herself he seemed to realize that the moment was finished. He would not press her. Even in that instant of reaction and distaste, Patricia had to admit that Julian Haverholt had his points. He had left her the tatters of her pride. Another man might have protested, might have recalled to her mind her own responsibility, might have accused her of provoking the situation, might have accused her of the same things of which she accused herself. The girl sat thinking.

Suddenly she said abruptly, "I don't know what was wrong with you. I must have been crazy. I'm sorry—oh, about everything."

"You do take things hard, don't you?" he returned and added, "Never apologize, Patricia, particularly to me. It's wasted effort for I assure you that I never, under any circumstances, apologize."

"Perhaps," she managed, "you're more satisfied with yourself."

"And, why not? Isn't that more pleasant than living a life that is one long crying jag?"

"I smile occasionally," said Patricia and did.

Haverholt's own smile helped her. The bad moment was over. They were back to normal, or almost. It was then that the telephone rang in an adjoining room. The man went to answer it. She heard the murmur of his voice. Presently, he came back.

"We're having guests," he told her. "A couple of friends of mine are at the very gates. Nice fellows. I hope you like them. There was nothing to do except to let them come."

Again he was making it easy for her. He had seen that the occasion was wrecked and was of no mind to permit her to mourn over the wreckage. What an amazing person Julian Haverholt was!

There was a hammering on the door. Haverholt stepped into the foyer. Patricia heard a confusion of male greetings, heard the plop of sticks and overcoats being piled on chairs, heard Haverholt's "You're just in time to meet my new bridge partner."

Then, they were in the living room, Haverholt and two other men. Patricia's heart gave a great leap. One of the visitors was Clark Tracy. The girl rose impulsively, her hand outstretched. She stopped foolishly before the polite inquiry of Tracy's gaze.

She realized that Clark Tracy did not recognize her.

Patricia stopped in the center of the room and wished that the floor might open to swallow her up. She felt, in that first moment, dazed and sick. She had thought about Clark Tracy so often and so vainly, had spun such dreams and fancies around him, had remembered him, with such exquisite accuracy, that it seemed incredible that he should have forgotten her utterly. Yet, he had forgotten. They had met a single time and he had forgotten.

She stood very still, the light striking sparks from her red gold hair. She watched the three men approach.

"Patricia," said Haverholt, "this is Mr. Tracy and this is Mr. Gove. A couple of rotten bridge players but likeable for all that."

Until the very last she had hoped that some spark might flicker in Tracy's eyes. He merely inclined his head. Somehow, she too bowed. Haverholt completed his introduction.

"Gentlemen, my niece, Patricia Haverholt."

The girl's face went blank in her astonishment. Had Haverholt really said, "my niece"? She looked up at him. His glance was veiled. She had opened her lips for protest when Tracy said in his warm, remembered voice, "Julian has been telling us all about you."

"A relative to be proud of, isn't she?" chimed in Haverholt, laying an affectionate arm across her rigid shoulder. He continued, "I haven't seen Patricia since she was a child. I had no hopes that she would turn out so well." He added reflectively, "My brother was a homey man."

They all laughed, all except Patricia. She was bewildered and angry. She guessed that Haverholt was enjoying himself in his own diabolical way. What could she do? Certainly, she could not announce that she was not his niece, not now. He looked at her speculatively and her gaze warned him that later...

For the present, she sat with the others sipping her cocktail, nibbling at little cakes that tasted like sawdust and ashes, listening to desultory light conversation, answering the questions that came her way. Young Philip Gove, with his soft brown eyes and warm olive coloring, made her attention. He was both shy and eager. At another time she might have found him charming. Now, she resented his persistence.

It has been estimated that daily from 100,000,000 to 200,000,000 of shooting stars are destroyed by our atmosphere, and taking the average as 150,000,000, it is probable that our earth, revolving upon its axis, destroys 3,500,000,000 of them yearly. Victims Lack "Pep"

In addition to greatly reducing the number of cases, the commission has triumphed in its battle against filth and uncleanliness. This was only made possible by the rigid enforcement of laws governing hygiene, and the education of the affected sections to the dangers of hookworm and other diseases that result from carelessness habits of hygiene.

Persons afflicted with hookworm are described as being lazy. They lack "pep," and strength and show definite signs of physical and mental backwardness. As the disease progresses, digestive disturbances appear. A peculiar symptom of this

Government Scandals Popping This Time In Treasury Department

WASHINGTON—More government scandals, not disclosed as yet, are brewing. The latest are in Henry Morgenthau's Treasury Department though not involving him. They concern the New York Customs Bureau handling of goods duty free. Morgenthau is preparing for a housecleaning. The other scandals grow out of the Treasury's handling of building contracts. There have been delays, shuffling of specifications, questionable handling of contracts... Morgenthau, once he took the Treasury, moved promptly to shake this up... He removed "Chip" Robert, dapper Assistant Secretary from Atlanta, Georgia, from supervision of the Treasury's public building projects, but made no charges against him. Robert's official record is clear... Secretary Ickes is taking a hand in the investigation.

Cherub - Watchdog

The man chiefly responsible for exposing the attempt graft in Army motor trucks was cherub-faced Ross Collins. The Mississippi Congressman is chief watchdog of the Army's budget... When the Cavalry wants more polo ponies, or aviators ask for spurs, Collins is the man who scratches out their requests... Though J. B. Woodside of General Motors, Collins learned of changed specifications, attempted collusion, took the charges direct to the White House.

Honest Harold Ickes and Silent Henry Wallace were ordered on vacation by Roosevelt. They drove two hours into Virginia to Luray. There Ickes dictated three speeches and Wallace wrote part of a book.

After two days, Ickes came back to Washington. The President scolded laughingly. "You're like a small boy told to stay away from school who comes to class anyway." Senator Hiram Johnson and his wife are tremendously fond of a small Pekinese... At the International Wheat Conference in Rome April 5, the United States will favor a stabilized export price for wheat of 50 cents gold per bushel from all wheat exporting countries... Dr. Grau San Martin, the small pup that President Coolidge brought back from Cuba in his overcoat pocket, has now developed a healthy bark and bite... Ambassador Trotsky, new Soviet envoy, snaps his fingers at diplomatic precedent. The Washington memorial services for the assassinated Premier of Roumania were attended by all diplomats having diplomatic relations with Roumania... This did not include Russia, whose army stands with fixed bayonets along the border of Bessarabia... But despite this, and without an invitation, Trotsky came to pay his respects to the dead Premier.

The Wreckers

Difference among members of the Senate banking committee over the stock exchange control bill is more than the usual form divergence... Personal feeling runs high; in fact so much so that the proponents label the opponents: "The wreckers." Included in "the wreckers" are Goldsborough, a Maryland banker; Walcott of Connecticut, a one-time Wall Street broker; Townsend, a Delaware banker; and "Ham" Kean, multi-millionaire banker and broker with offices in Wall Street but residing in New Jersey... Supporters of the bill charge privately that certain committee under foes are "leaking" confidential committee information to Wall Street... "Coley" Blease, South Carolina's one-time Kingfish, has his hat in the political ring again... Defeated for re-election to the Senate by wily, competent Jimmy Byrnes in 1930, Coley made another try two years later against the veteran Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith... The latter was too much for him, and Coley went down a bad loser... This year he has announced his candidacy for governor... Coley has been running regularly for public office since 1892.

Twenty-Year War On Hookworm Is Successful

Few Cases of This Once Common Disease Now Encountered, Says Dr. Copeland

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States senator from New York
 Former Commissioner of Health,
 New York City

WE ARE indebted to the Rockefeller Foundation of Medicine for its many discoveries in the field of medicine. One of the achievements of this notable institution is the control of hookworm, a disease that at one time was especially prevalent in the southern part of the United States.

It is now almost twenty years since the Rockefeller sanitary commission attempted to eradicate this pestilence. At the time the commission began its work more than thirty-nine per cent of the school children in the south were afflicted with hookworm. Though the disease is not entirely eradicated, few cases of hookworm are now seen.

Hookworm is caused by small worms which enter the skin. The worms attack particularly those who walk barefooted. For this reason the first precaution taken against the disease is to advise against going barefooted. Once the worms reach the skin they burrow through it, get into the circulation, and eventually reach the intestine. Here they multiply rapidly.

If unmolested they severely undermine the health of the victim. The disease is contagious.

Once the hookworm becomes lodged in any portion of the intestine, it may live there for years unless destroyed by proper medicine. It has been estimated that an individual afflicted with hookworm may harbor from a dozen to a thousand worms. Each worm sucks blood from the intestinal wall, great damage is done to the health of the victim.

Hookworms are destroyed by the use of "thymol" or "carbon tetrachloride." Of course, this should only be used under the supervision of a physician. He will prescribe the necessary dosage. As a rule, a few doses destroy the worms and eggs of the hookworm.

Answers to Health Queries

J. W. Q.—I am 16 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall, what should I weigh?

A.—You should weigh about 114 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of your age and should be determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no importance.

City People

ESTABLISHMENT in a New York municipal hospital of a department of free plastic surgery suggested to a Canadian editorial writer that perhaps it is a waste of public funds to spend millions for monumental buildings and beautiful parks only to have them disfigure and marred by association with human beings nature has seen fit to mould in ugly patterns.

It is true that life in the city is made less pleasant and beautiful by the human derelicts and monstrosities attracted there and that more handsome features would heighten the joys of routine existence.

But wouldn't that be wasted money also without a little "brain surgery" to beautify the urban intellect? While it is true that beautiful parks and public buildings and handsome faces help to elevate the mind, there is room for some direct elevating.

Cities are the true centers of culture because of their libraries, museums, concerts and leaders in the fields of thought and art, yet it is not their culture that is their chief attraction either to the natives or to visitors. With every cultural advance at their command the metropolitans do not attain a culture much higher than that of the small town citizen. It has been said with a high degree of truth that the native of New York is the most provincial person in the country.

Granite, trees and music are not always outward evidence of urban culture. Museums have been built, parks laid out and symphony or choral societies supported by public subscriptions, not because of a genuine taste for these better things of life, but because it was considered the proper thing to do and because other cities have them.

The test of virtue is to decide that dancing is sinful before you get stiff with rheumatism.

Keep Our Waters Clean

PERHAPS one of the most difficult tasks confronting the various states is the correction of the water pollution evil. It is a problem presenting many complexities becoming more entangled each year as industry, municipality and individual persist in violating the laws of nature by turning our lakes and streams into dumping grounds for their wastes and sewage.

Henry Ward Baldwin, one of the trustees of the Isaak Walton League of America, says: "America's vast riches have been derived fundamentally from three sources—land, water and wild life. Of these three pure water is the most essential. With out water life can not exist. Nature grants this blessing to favored lands, and man at the most can only regulate in part its distribution. The supply that comes as the greatest gift of God to man is pure and health giving. The responsibility for its proper care rests with us. Nature controls the quantity, man must control the quality and give unimpeded to future generations this priceless heritage."

The residents of every state know what water pollution means. In their generation they have seen the cool, sparkling, clear water of their lakes and streams turned into sluggish, filth-laden sewers. They have watched this menace spread as civilization advanced and often the community health has been endangered by this evil. Fish life has been destroyed and every water right of the riparian owner downstream from the point of pollution has been violated.

Science many times has pointed the way to correct this abuse. Industrial wastes, raw sewage and other contaminating refuse are treated so that whatever liquid residue may reach our watercourses is harmless. It is our bounden duty to banish water pollution.

A man isn't a failure until his chief pleasure is in telling the faults of his successful friends.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By JOAN CLAYTON
COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

To help support her stepmother and stepisters, young and beautiful Patricia Warren, a skilled card player, plays bridge for fifty cents an hour at parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, offers to make Pat his secretary and partner. His amorous advances cause Pat to decline his business offer much to her stepmother's chagrin. Pat meets Clark Tracy, the polo player and her ideal, at Mrs. Sycott's. She is heartbroken to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. Bill McGee, a racketeer, is interested in Pat but she loathes him. However, afraid to refuse his invitation, she accompanies him to a New Year's Eve dance. He is shot by a rival gangster. Frantic, Pat rushes home only to be put out by her stepmother who says the police are looking for Pat. Unable to find employment, Pat turns to professional bridge. One day, she is stunned when Haverholt happens to be one of her opponents. She becomes unnerved and loses heavily. Haverholt takes her home and renews his bridge business offer. Pat accepts. While celebrating the partnership in Haverholt's home, Dorothy Luray, his former secretary, appears in a jealous rage. Pat is about to go but Dorothy's insolence causes her to stay. Dorothy leaves.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

They entered the living room. Patricia sat down, feeling weary and flat and forlorn. Dorothy Luray had spoiled everything. Haverholt stood in the middle of the room, looking at her.

"You were an awfully good sport," he observed after a space. "I know it was darn difficult for you, but you took it like a trooper. You should be proud of yourself."

"I'm not," said Patricia slowly, thickly, "not proud at all."

"I would have given anything to have prevented what happened," the man began anew. "If there were anything I could have done . . ."

His voice trailed to silence. He shrugged, concluded, "It was just one of those things."

"I suppose so," Patricia conceded a second time. She said, "I don't really want a drink."

"You need one now. Bacardi was made for times like this." Silently he opened a corner cabinet that turned itself miraculously into a tiny, lacquered bar, busied himself preparing the shaker and selecting the ingredients, all in a manner both natural and casual. Glancing at Patricia's somber face, he said, "It isn't fun any more, is that what you are thinking?"

"More or less."

"Why not think of me, or my side of it? I had plans too. I counted on having you here, counted on your first impression. Why not remember that things might be spoiled for me too?"

Patricia said nothing. Haverholt carefully completed his pouring, turned to say abruptly, "Think it over while I get the ice. You don't need my help. Will you excuse me?"

"Yes."

He left the room. No sooner had he gone than Patricia was on her feet. Noiselessly and swiftly she entered the foyer, paused, her hand on the outer door. Somewhere in the back of the house she heard movement. Haverholt getting the ice . . . What would he think when he returned to find her vanished? He had thought her brave and mature, a good sport. "Good girl," he said, as he dumped the ice into the open shaker.

"What do you mean?"

"Don't you know why I was away so long?"

"No, I don't."

"I was giving you your chance to leave without argument if you wanted to leave. May I say that I'm glad you didn't?" Patricia regarded him with perplexed and troubled eyes. "Don't try to make me out, my dear," he continued.

"Why not accept me as I am? You like me. Isn't that enough?"

"I can't understand you at all," she faltered. Suddenly she burst out, "How did Dorothy Luray happen to be here?"

There was a silence. Haverholt looked at her quizzically.

He set down the shaker and crossed the room. He stood before her. He said gravely:

"Have you the right to ask that question?"

"I don't know," muttered Patricia. Her tawny head came up. Hot with shame, she said, "I guess I haven't."

"Would you like to have the right?"

The air was tense, electric. Their eyes elung together. To Patricia it seemed that some new element had entered the quiet room, some element disturbing, frightening, yet perilously sweet. She was conscious of the slow, thick beating of her heart. Outside, beyond the gardens, the distant traffic throbbed.

"Are you in love with me, Patricia?"

She woke as if from a dream. The spell was gone. In love with him? Incredible that she should have allowed that question to be asked! Yet she had allowed it. Her own actions, her own words were responsible for this.

She brought the situation upon herself. "Of course I'm not," she said, trying to appear composed and at ease and failing.

She felt cheap and ashamed. She had been another Dorothy Luray, suspicious, questioning, jealous, and with far less right. She should have set the tone of this meeting. She had permitted Haverholt to set it.

"Are you so sure?" he asked, sinking to the arm of her chair and continuing to look into her eyes.

"Quite sure," she informed him steadily.

"Well then—"

He rose. Like herself he seemed to realize that the moment was finished. He would not press her. Robert's official record is clear . . . Secretary Ickes is taking a hand in the investigation.

Cherub - Watchdog

The man chiefly responsible for exposing the attempt graft in Army motor trucks was cherub-faced Ross Collins. The Mississippi Congressman is chief watchdog of the Army's budget . . . When the Cavalry wants more polo ponies, or aviators ask for spurs, Collins is the man who scratches out their requests . . . Though J. B. Woodside of General Motors, Collins learned of changed specifications, attempted collusion, took the charges direct to the White House.

Honest Harold Ickes and Silent Henry Wallace were ordered on vacation by Roosevelt. They drove two hours into Virginia to Luray. There Ickes dictated three speeches and Wallace wrote part of a book . . . After two days, Ickes came back to Washington . . . The President scolded laughingly: "You're like a small boy told to stay away from school who comes to class anyway." . . . Senator Hiram Johnson and his wife are tremendously fond of a small Pekinese . . . At the International Wheat Conference in Rome April 5, the United States will favor a stabilized export price for wheat of 50 cents gold per bushel from all wheat exporting countries . . . Dr. Grau San Martin, the small pup that Ambassador Wells brought back from Cuba in his overcoat pocket, has now developed a healthy bark and bite . . . Ambassador Troyanovsky, new Soviet envoy, snaps his fingers at diplomatic precedent. The Washington memorial services for the assassinated Premier of Rumania were attended by all diplomats having diplomatic relations with Rumania . . . This did not include Russia, whose army stands with fixed bayonets along the bory of Bessarabia . . . But despite disorder is the perverted desire of the sufferer to consume odd articles, such as clay, dirt, resin, chalk and hair.

Disease Is Contagious
Hookworm is caused by small worms which enter the skin. The worms attack particularly those who walk barefooted. For this reason the disease is to advise against going barefooted. Once the worms reach the skin they burrow through it, get into the circulation, and eventually reach the intestine. Here they multiply rapidly.

If uncleaned they severely undermine the health of the victim. The disease is contagious.

Once the hookworm becomes lodged in any portion of the intestine, it may live there for years unless destroyed by proper medicine. It has been estimated that an individual afflicted with hookworm may harbor from a dozen to a thousand worms. Since each worm sucks blood from the intestinal wall, great damage is done to the health of the victim.

Hookworms are destroyed by the use of "thymol" or "carbol" tetra-chloride. Of course, this should only be used under the supervision of a physician. He will prescribe the necessary dosage. As a rule, a few doses destroy the worms and eggs of the hookworm.

Answers to Health Queries
J. W. Q.—I am 16 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall, what should I weigh?

A.—You should weigh about 114 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of your age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

The Wreckers

Difference among members of the Senate banking committee over the stock exchange control bill is more than the usual form divergence . . . Personal feeling runs high; in fact so much so that the proponents label the opponents: "The wreckers" . . . Included in "the wreckers" are Goldsborough, a Maryland banker; Walcott of Connecticut, a one-time Wall Street broker; Townsend, a Delaware banker; and "Ham" Kean, multi-millionaire banker and broker with offices in Wall Street but residing in New Jersey . . . Supporters of the bill charge privately that certain committee under foes are "leaking" confidential committee information to Wall Street . . . "Coley" Bleasie, South Carolina's one-time Kingfish, has his hat in the political ring again . . . Defeated for re-election to the Senate by wily, competent Jimmy Byrnes in 1930, Coley made another try two years later against the veteran Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith . . . The latter was too much for him, and Coley went down a bad loser . . . This year he has announced his candidacy for governor . . . Coley has been running regularly for public office since 1892.

Will War Come?

lively that war will not come in this part of Europe. Today 40,000 Italian soldiers are under arms in Belzono, chief city of the South Tyrol. They are there to "keep the Nazis from taking Austria."

Nevertheless cool appraisal of the possibilities make it seem to an outside observer unlikely that war will come, even if Austria does "Go Nazi."

Yet Italy is worried now as never before since the war. Until Hitler came to power in Germany the Italian possession of the provinces she took from Austria seemed as secure as her possession of any part of her land. On the other side of the Brenner pass was only little Austria, a nation of seven million with an army of 20,000. Italy felt safer than she had felt in centuries.

The Austro-Hungarian empire with its 57,000,000 inhabitants, its ambitious monarchy, its limitless desire for territorial expansion, had always threatened Italy. When the breakup of that empire came and left tiny Austria, a comfortable little pillow between Italy and the German reich, Italy felt the solution was ideal.

Today in place of the Austro-Hungarian empire of 57,000,000 ambitious but nevertheless easy-going Hapsburg subjects, there is about to appear on the northern frontier of Italy a nation of 72,000,000 German Nazis who may be a number of things but not easy-going. The South Tyrol would be one step away from the Nazi Tyrol. Trieste would be one hop from the border.

PRIZE OF ITALIANS
This port was Italy's chief prize from the war. Propaganda to bring Italy into the war on the side of the allies showed an Italian soldier peering over the trench with his bayonet casting a shadow that led to the port of Trieste. It is a prize worth coveting.

Back in bleak Berlin it will be another sixty days before spring comes. Sun like this in Trieste will not come to Berlin at all. Germans love the sun. They grow ecstatic over Italian skies. Before the war their chief complaint was that Germany had "no place in the sun." They meant it symbolically.

They meant that Germany had become a unified nation only after 1871, after the other great powers had already divided up the colonial countries. But Germans think of the sun not only as a symbol of economic advantages. They think of it literally, sentimentally, wishfully.

But Trieste has much more than a sentimental attraction for a northern race that lacks sunshine. Trieste is half as far from Bavaria as Bavaria is from Hamburg. Freight charges for all the lower third of Germany would be cheaper via Trieste than via Germany's north sea ports. Germany hereafter has never been within reaching distance of the Adriatic. Tomorrow Germany, the greater Germany, a Germany stronger than ever before, may be within one short step of Trieste.

CAUSING EXCITEMENT
That, in a nutshell, is one of the reasons for "all the excitement about Austria." It is at any rate one of the chief reasons for the Italian excitement. Whether Germany or anybody in authority in Germany would contemplate taking that short step seems improbable for at least as far as one can foresee. But that is not sufficient for Italy. Italy is worried not about what one can foresee tomorrow but about what one can't foresee day after tomorrow.

Trieste is far better off than her sister port, Fiume, an hour and a half by automobile across the Austrian peninsula. The road is another of the magnificent new military roads built by the Italian government since the war.

From its higher points the view of the Yugoslav-Italian frontier shows how deeply post-war Italy has thought in terms of war-like defense. The frontier here is fortified from the tips of the Alps to their bases, with emplacements, machine-gun nests, pill boxes, barbed-wire.

In Fiume only a tiny river separates Italy from Yugoslavia on the one side is Fiume, on the other the Yugoslav port of Susak. D'Annunzio took Fiume for the glory of Italy, but today in the Fort of Fiume the docks are even emptier than in Trieste. Warehouses stand empty, broken-windowed, deserted. The cafes are bare of guests; the silence of the streets hardly broken by the sound of motor horns.

HUMMING WITH LIFE
Just across the river the Jugo-

"THAT LITTLE GAME" Inter-nat'l Cartoon Co., N.Y.—By B. Link

slay port of Eusak hums with life. Its diminutive harbor is crowded with ships, not an empty place in sight. Stavedores sweat under massive sacks of grain and teams of head-beamed horses haul tons of lumber up and down the narrow lanes that serve one of the smallest and busiest ports in the world. All the modern machine of Fiume, its capacious docks, stand idle. Susak wrestles its cargoes in and out by hand. But Fiume is Italian today and Susak Yugoslavian. Barbed wire and machine guns make the borders; not economics.

Just a year ago the danger of war between Yugoslavia and Italy was great. Yugoslav patriots had demolished statues of the Latin Venice in a town on the Dalmatian coast. Italian patriots planned to revenge the insult and make it an excuse to regain for Italy that part of Dalmatia which centuries ago was Venetian and which had been promised to Italy in the secret treaty of London of 1915. The plan was checked in time, and before fresh trouble could arise, Hitler rose to supreme power in Germany.

CHANGED BY HITLER
His coming changed the aspect of the Italian-Yugoslav conflict. For the moment at any rate their quarrels became secondary. Here too, Hitler has proved a peace-maker, paradoxically, ironically perhaps but nevertheless a peace-maker. For Italy's attention today has turned from the Yugoslav frontier to the Brenner, and the army corps that counts in the north of Italy is the army corps in Bolzano.

But Mussolini is anxious above all things to keep the peace. He does not want to use the Bolzano army corps. He has tried to bind the present Austria and Hungary to Italy by economic ties, and to strengthen them to resist the Nazi push. Today he has given Austria the right to import through Trieste, cotton, coffee, cocoa and a series of other articles, not only duty free, but with a rebate on handling charges that amounts to the freight from Trieste to Vienna. These and other economic measures will be tried. Nevertheless the Italian army corps in Bolzano still represents the most important real political element in the "Austrian problem."

Trieste, Fiume, all northern Italy are constantly aware that army corps is there. Elsewhere only the chancellories of Berlin, Paris, London are sufficiently alive to Europe's troubles to be wondering today what it means. Would it march? If it did, then what?

Only Rome knows the answers. Monday—Knickerbocker presents the first installment of an interview with Premier Mussolini of Italy in which Mussolini gives his views on "Will War Come." The second and final installment of the interview will be published Tuesday.

Will War Come?

tively that war will not come in this part of Europe. Today 40,000 Italian soldiers are under arms in Bolzano, chief city of the South Tyrol. They are there to "keep the Nazis from taking Austria." Nevertheless cool appraisal of the possibilities make it seem to an outside observer unlikely that war will come, even if Austria does "Go Nazi."

Yet Italy is worried now as never before since the war. Until Hitler came to power in Germany the Italian possession of the provinces she took from Austria seemed as secure as her possession of any part of her land. On the other side of the Brenner pass was only little Austria, a nation of seven million with an army of 20,000. Italy felt safer than she had felt in centuries.

The Austro-Hungarian empire with its 57,000,000 inhabitants, its ambitious monarchy, its limitless desire for territorial expansion, had always threatened Italy. When the breakup of that empire came and left tiny Austria, a comfortable little pillow between Italy and the German reich, Italy felt the solution was ideal.

Today in place of the Austro-Hungarian empire of 57,000,000 ambitious but nevertheless easy-going Hapsburg subjects, there is about to appear on the northern frontier of Italy a nation of 72,000,000 German Nazis who may be a number of things but not easy-going. The South Tyrol would be one step away from the Nazi Tyrol. Trieste would be one hop from the border.

PRIZE OF ITALIANS
This port was Italy's chief prize from the war. Propaganda to bring Italy into the war on the side of the allies showed an Italian soldier peering over the trenches, with his bayonet casting a shadow that led to the port of Trieste. It is a prize worth coveting.

Back in bleak Berlin it will be another sixty days before spring comes. Sun like this in Trieste will not come to Berlin at all. Germans love the sun. They grow ecstatic over Italian skies. Before the war their chief complaint was that Germany had "no place in the sun." They meant it symbolically.

They meant that Germany had become a unified nation only after 1871, after the other great powers had already divided up the colonial countries. But Germans think of the sun not only as a symbol of economic advantages. They think of it literally, sentimentally, wishfully.

But Trieste has much more than a sentimental attraction for a northern race that lacks sunshine. Trieste is half as far from Bavaria as Bavaria is from Hamburg. Freight charges for all the lower third of Germany would be cheaper via Trieste than via Germany's north sea ports. Germany heretofore has never been within reaching distance of the Adriatic. Tomorrow Germany, the greater Germany, a Germany stronger than ever before, may be within one short step of Trieste.

CAUSING EXCITEMENT

That, in a nutshell, is one of the reasons for "all the excitement about Austria." It is at any rate one of the chief reasons for the Italian excitement. Whether Germany or anybody in authority in Germany would contemplate taking that short step seems improbable for at least as far as one can foresee. But that is not sufficient for Italy. Italy is worried about what one can foresee tomorrow but about what one can't foresee day after tomorrow.

Trieste is far better off than her sister port, Fiume, an hour and a half by automobile across the Austrian peninsula. The road is another of the magnificent new military roads built by the Italian government since the war. From its higher points the view of the Yugoslav-Italian frontier shows how deeply post-war Italy has thought in terms of war-like defence. The frontier here is fortified from the tips of the Alps to their bases, with emplacements, machine-gun nests, pill boxes, barbed-wire.

In Fiume only a tiny river separates Italy from Yugoslavia on the one side. In Fiume, on the other, the Yugoslav port of Susak. D'Annunzio took Fiume for the glory of Italy, but today in the Fort of Fiume the docks are even emptier than in Trieste. Warehouses stand empty, broken-windowed, deserted. The cafes are bare of guests; the silence of the streets hardly broken by the sound of motor horns.

HUMMING WITH LIFE

slav port of Eusak hums with life. Its diminutive harbor is crowded with ships, not an empty place in sight. Stevedores sweat under massive sacks of grain and teams of broad-beamed horses haul tons of lumber up and down the narrow lanes that serve one of the smallest and busiest ports in the world. All the modern machine of Fiume, its capacious docks, stand idle. Susak wrestles its cargoes in and out by hand. But Fiume is Italian today, and Susak Yugoslavian. Barbed wire and machine guns make the borders; not economics.

Just a year ago the danger of war between Yugoslavia and Italy was great. Yugoslav patriots had demolished statues of the Lion of Venice in a town on the Dalmatian coast. Italian patriots planned to revenge this insult and make it an excuse to regain for Italy that part of Dalmatia which centuries ago was Venetian and which had been promised to Italy in the secret treaty of London of 1915. The plan was checked in time, and before fresh trouble could arise, Hitler rose to supreme power in Germany.

CHANGED BY HITLER

His coming changed the aspect of the Italian-Yugoslav conflict. For the moment at any rate their quarrels became secondary. Here too, Hitler has proved a peace-maker, paradoxically, ironically perhaps but nevertheless a peace-maker. For Italy's attention today has turned from the Yugoslav frontier to the Brenner, and the army corps that counts in the north of Italy is the army corps in Bolzano.

But Mussolini is anxious above all things to keep the peace. He does not want to use the Bolzano army corps. He has tried to bind the present Austria and Hungary to Italy by economic ties, and to strengthen them to resist the Nazi push. Today he has given Austria the right to import through Trieste, cotton, coffee, cocoa and a series of other articles, not only duty free, but with a rebate on handling charges that amounts to the freight from Trieste to Vienna. These and other economic measures will be tried. Nevertheless the Italian army corps in Bolzano still represents the most important real political element in the "Austrian problem."

Trieste, Fiume, all northern Italy are constantly aware that army corps is there. Elsewhere only the chancelleries of Berlin, Paris, London are sufficiently alive to Europe's troubles to be wondering today what it means. When it march? If it did, then what?

Only Rome knows the answers. Monday—Knickerbocker presents the first installment of an interview with Premier Mussolini of Italy in which Mussolini gives his views on "Will War Come." The second and final installment of the interview will be published Tuesday.

Soldier, Statesman

George Washington

(An Editorial)

George Washington was the type of man that is difficult to know or to understand. General Washington is known to us, and President Washington; but George Washington is a little known man. Washington has been pictured as a lovely figure of lofty intellect and tremendous moral force. This characterization of him is true because he was a man who had visions of the future as well as sharp vivid pictures of the present. He was great as a statesman, greater as a leader of men, but greatest of all merely as a man. With his unselfish devotion to duty, his courage, his strong will, his hopefulness in face of defeat, his marvelous insight into human nature, and his abiding faith in God, few if any heroes of history can be placed beside him.

Virginia Cady's home was the scene of the fourth meeting of the Athletic and Nature group last Thursday.

Plans were made for the group to go bicycling tomorrow, weather permitting.

Eleanor Miller gave a report on the tennis star, Helen Willis Macy.

A salad course and cocoa was served at the close of the meeting, the committee consisting of Virginia Cady, Bernice Liston, Regina Mack, and Martha McCrady.

The March meeting will be held at Dorothy Lyle's home.

The Music and Dramatics group held a meeting at the home of Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick Thursday evening, February 15.

This group is studying the different epochs in the history of music. Reports were given by Marianne Bennett, Elizabeth Dowden, and Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistant, Margaret Bower.

'Circle' Pictures Contract Is Let

The Thornton studio was awarded the contract for the senior photographs according to an announcement made by William Weldon, business manager of the 1934 Annual, Wednesday.

A general discussion of the Yearbook was also held at a meeting of the Senior class Wednesday. Special emphasis was laid upon the fact that the cooperation of the entire group was needed in order to make it a success.

2 Novels, Play Are Discussed

A committee including Marjorie Bowers, chairman, Polly Briggs, Horace Gilmore and Otis Mader chose the name Sigma Phi Omega for the first group of the E. M. S.

The next meeting will be held in three weeks at Elsie Ann Bremer's home.

The Junior Girl Reserves will hold a candy sale on March 1.

C.H.S. Loses Two More to Cupid

"The Forty-Niners"

The rocks, the rills, the plains and hills, the shimmering heat, Alone he trudged across the sand, Shuffling his weary feet.

He had travelled for many a mile that day, And his clothes were caked with dust, But in his heart there rang a song, "On to the gold fields or bust!"

Far back on the trail his wagon lay, A derelict—burned in an Indian fight, But this caused him much dismay, Onward he strode in the fading light.

And as he walked he thought of home, His wife and his mother, old, And he thought of how the joy would come, As they read of his "load of gold."

For he was but one of the many, Drawn on by that golden lust, "On to the land of riches, On to the gold fields or bust!"

—Robert Ward, 1935.

Aughinbaugh Urges Students To Learn More About Their State.

250 ATTEND LECTURE

'Nothing More Beautiful Than Ohio River,' He Says.

"Statistics show that 96 per cent of the population of the state live there that they die. Since Ohio is to be your future home you should know it better," thus E. A. Aughinbaugh, State Director of Visual Education, began his illustrated lecture entitled "Know Ohio."

"Ohio ranks fourth in population and we can proudly say that not one bit of propaganda has been given out to attract this great population," continued the state director.

"Your state has more cities, towns and hamlets than any other state in the Union," the speaker told his interested audience. "Only 13 per cent live in the large cities."

The spectators were then taken on a pictorial trip through the state with the lecturer giving the history of the "high spots" of Ohio. These include the State House, Indian lake, Ohio Caverns, memorials erected in memory of the soldiers who were killed in expeditions against the Indians, the home of Edison, tomb of Harding, Seven Caves, and the home of Emmett, the author of "Dixie."

"Your state possesses 84,000 miles of road, one half of which is either brick, concrete or macadamized. Not one drop of irrigation is needed to produce Ohio's farm products."

"People will advise you to see the many wonders of the world. But having seen them, I can say that there is nothing more beautiful than the Ohio river," concluded the speaker.

Mr. Aughinbaugh's address was well received by the 250 pupils present.

Ten cents admission was charged, a part of the proceeds going to the Department of Visual Education.

Soldier, Statesman

George Washington

(An Editorial)

George Washington was the type of man that is difficult to know or to understand. General Washington is known to us, and President Washington; but George Washington is a little known man. Washington has been pictured as a lovely figure of lofty intellect and tremendous moral force. This characterization of him is true because he was a man who had visions of the future as well as sharp vivid pictures of the present. He was great as a soldier, equally great as a statesman, greater as a leader of men, but greatest of all merely as a man.

With his unselfish devotion to duty, his courage, his strong will, his hopefulness in face of defeat, his marvelous insight into human nature, and his abiding faith in God, few if any heroes of history can be placed beside him.

Virginia Cady's home was the scene of the fourth meeting of the Athletic and Nature group last Thursday.

Plans were made for the group to go bicycling tomorrow, weather permitting.

Eleanor Miller gave a report on the tennis star, Helen Willis Moody.

A salad course and cocoa was served at the close of the meeting, the committee consisting of Virginia Cady, Bernice Liston, Regina Mack, and Martha McCrady.

The March meeting will be held at Dorothy Lyle's home.

The Music and Dramatics group held a meeting at the home of Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick Thursday evening, February 15.

This group is studying the different epochs in the history of music. Reports were given by Marianne Bennett, Elizabeth Dowden, and Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistant, Margaret Bower.

'Circle' Pictures Contract Is Let

The Thornton studio was awarded the contract for the senior photographs according to an announcement made by William Weldon, business manager of the 1934 Annual, Wednesday.

The contract was let by competitive bidding.

The making of the pictures will begin next week.

A general discussion of the Yearbook was also held at a meeting of the Senior class Wednesday. Special emphasis was laid upon the fact that the cooperation of the entire group was needed in order to make it a success.

2 Novels, Play Are Discussed

At the meeting of the E. M. S. English honorary society, held Monday night at the home of Lydia Given, reports were given on a play, "The Great Adventure," by Mary K. May and on two novels, "Death Comes From the Archbishop" and "Rain," by Martha Rader and Charlotte Moore, respectively.

A committee including Margaret Bowers, chairman, Polly Briggs, Horace Gilmore and Otis Mader chose the name Sigma Phi Omega for the first group of the E. M. S.

The next meeting will be held in three weeks at Elsie Ann Brehmer's home.

The Junior Girl Reserves will hold a candy sale on March 1.

"The Forty-Niners"

The rocks, the rills, the plains and hills,
All lay in the shimmering heat,
Alone he trudged across the sand,
Shuffling his weary feet.

He had travelled for many a mile that day,
And his clothes were caked with dust,
But in his heart there rang a song,
"On to the gold fields or bust!"

Far back on the trail his wagon lay,
A derelict—burned in an Indian fight.

But this caused him much dismay,
Onward he strode in the fading light.

And as he walked he thought of home,
His wife and his mother, old,
And he thought of how the joy would come,
As they read of his "load of gold."

For he was but one of the many,
Drawn on by that golden lust,
"On to the land of riches,
On to the gold fields or bust!"

—Robert Ward, 1935.

Aughinbaugh Urges Students To Learn More About Their State.

250 ATTEND LECTURE

'Nothing More Beautiful Than Ohio River,' He Says.

"Statistics show that 96 per cent of the population of the state live there till they die. Since Ohio is to be your future home you should know it better." Thus E. A. Aughinbaugh, State Director of Visual Education, began his illustrated lecture entitled "Know Ohio."

"Ohio ranks fourth in population and we can proudly say that not one bit of propaganda has been given out to attract this great population," continued the state director.

"Your state has more cities, towns and hamlets than any other state in the Union," the speaker told his interested audience. "Only 13 per cent live in the large cities."

The spectators were then taken on a pictorial trip through the state with the lecturer giving the history of the "high spots" of Ohio. These include the State House, Indian lake, Ohio Caverns, memorials erected in memory of the soldiers who were killed in expeditions against the Indians, the home of Edison, tomb of Harding, Seven Caves, and the home of Emmett, the author of "Dixie."

"Your state possesses 84,000 miles of road, one half of which is either brick, concrete or macadamized. Not one drop of irrigation is needed to produce Ohio's farm products."

"People will advise you to see the many wonders of the world. But having seen them, I can say that there is nothing more beautiful than the Ohio river," concluded the speaker.

Mr. Aughinbaugh's address was well received by the 250 pupils present.

Ten cents admission was charged, a part of the proceeds going to the Department of Visual Education.

The Hi-Y had a debate Tuesday on which contributed the most to America, George Washington or Abraham Lincoln. The side for Lincoln won.

On the Washington side were Floyd Dunlap and John Robinson. Those for Lincoln were Ned Plum, Jim Lyle and Tom Kirwin. The affirmative side lost a speaker when Bob May was unable to be present.

Principal E. I. Gephart was judge.

Combines the 4 All-Important Qualities

QUICK STARTING

Quick starting depends upon a group of very "light" liquids found in unfinished gasoline. Some are too gaseous and volatile, causing power loss and vapor lock. These are eliminated by the precision-controlled Blue Sunoco refining process which retains only the desirable, easily ignited liquids. To govern quick starting, these are combined in exactly the right proportions with other parts of finished Blue Sunoco.

FAST ACCELERATION

Blue Sunoco gives brilliant acceleration because it contains exactly the right amount of "medium light" liquids. Precision control—a process used in making Blue Sunoco protects it from any deviation; resulting in what we believe you will find to be, the liveliest motor fuel in the world.

LONG MILEAGE

Blue Sunoco's long mileage is due to knockless quiet and its exclusive manufacturing process which takes apart and rebuilds the "heavy" particles so that they actually contain more usable energy.

KNOCKLESS POWER

Gasoline must be knockless because when a motor knocks,
